REPUBLICANS, "ONCE MORE TO THE

Let every Republican in Springfield do his duty squarely and fully, on the streets and at the polls, Monday. The importance of the election should not be underestimated-neither should the strength of the enemy! The Democratic strikers will pecuniary persuasion can do tomorrow and Monday, and Republicans should get in

Our new English Minister, Phelps, is also a poet.

The Democrats of Springfield are vigilant and active.

The duty that lies nearest home is the duty first to be done!

If England can endure Phelps, America will try to get on without him

Mr. John H. Thomas is a Republican candidate for Council--in Wooster, Ohio!

The "Lost Cause" seems to have been Found. Now let the Democrats start out for Charley Ross.

The income of the Earl of Durham, who lost his suit for a divorce from his insane wife, is $370,000 a year.

All lame and lazy Republicans should start for the polls now! Then they will "get there" by Monday.

The April fool fiend is still at large. He will try to persuade some people to throw away their votes next Monday.

Citizens of Springfield! Do not waste any amunition in the fight next Monday. Put your ballots where they will count!

Fellow citizens! We are to save that portion of the country which lies within the corporate limits of the city of Springfield, next Monday.

Springfield Democrats didn't get anything at Washington. Hence they are very bungry and will try to capture something Monday. Watch them!

The local papers are trying to persuade the people of New Orleans to attend the Great World's Exposition, at least once, or, at any rate, to purchase tickets.

The widow of General Custar now gets a pension of $100 a month, and will make some money by her new book, "Boots and Saddles." She lives in a flat on 18th street, New York.

By the bright light, early Monday morning, every Republican and every citizen who wishes to promote the cause of public order and decency, and to rebuke the corruption-the worst sort of it, at that, which is illustrated in the open, unblushing at tempt to purchase votes with whisky and money-every such citizen should appear at his ward polls on Monday, April 6th, and deposit a clean, complete, genuine, the facility for shipping live frogs killed unscratched Republican ticket.

Mr. James P. Goodwin, the Republican candidate for the office of Mayor, is making friends daily. He is the kind of a man and leaves. When they arrive at their destination they are healthy and sound to win adherents upon personal contact. He makes a good impression, at first sight, in Europe is limited. I lived in France and grows in popular esteem the more the people see of him. He is a most excellent and worthy young men, who has fought his way onward and upward, in the battle.

The results a minimed. I reved in France dog. The catchers complied at once, whereupon Randolph screamed out in French are called a nation of frog-eaters, yet they do not consume one-tenth as many as the people of the United States. The frogs there are few and of him."—Clev.land Herald.

of life, and he has learned to do whatever work he has undertaken honestly and thoroughly. He has especial and strong qualifications for the position to which he aspires and to which he will be elected by the people of Springfield next Monday, by a big majority. We allude especially to Mr. Goodwin ecause his name is at the head of the Republican ticket. Fortunately we can speak quite as favorably of all the other gentlemen named as of Mr Goodwin. There is not a weak spot in the ticket Every man whose name appears on it is honest, worthy and capable and well adapted to the position for which he is named. It is a ticket throughout that does not need scratching and ought not to be scratched!

"BILL" AND "BOB."

We have received a note from the grac ful pen of "Garry Gaines," which we re gard as at least "semi-official," in which the qualifications of the Honorable William lawrence (familiarly known as "Bill") as Republican candidate for the office of Governor are ably set forth, and as "Garry" is a lady, and "dares" us to print the note, we present it herewith:

The office of First Comptroller, so ably filled by ex-Congressman Lawrence, has been no sinecure. It is one demanding assiduous labor and ability of no ordinary kind, and, we may add, no former comptrolle has given the office the position and it has acquired under the reputation regime of Judge Lawrence, he being the first who has ever published the decisions of the cases becoming before him. While there may not be quite so fascinating to the ordinary reader as a novel by Dickens, they are highly interesting to every good citizen as showing how the public moneys have been

The Washington home of Judge Lawrence is located in one of the most desirable parts of the city, is modern in style and convecience and was originally built for Ulyssus Grant, Jr. Mrs. Lawrence is a lovely hostess and leaves nothing to be desired by those who are so fortunate as to be her guests.

A good deal of quiet talk is going or among his triends in favor of Judge Lawrence for Governor of Obio, and assuredly the choice would be a most wise one. Not a favorite with the politicians, he is popular with the people, which is the best thing that can be said of any public man. His long experience and prudence in public affairs, executive ability and statesmanship, together with the prestige of a successful life, all tend to make his name the strongest yet mentioned for the Republican leadership on the State ticket in the coming Gubernatorial campaign.

Now, really, isn't Logan giving us rather too much of even a good thing! We try to see what lying, defamation and were led to understand that Gen. Bob Kennedy was Logan's gubernatorial candidate, and quite a vigorous canvass has been their work this evening. Every Republi- made in his behalt. O, Logan, thou "incan should report at once for service and satiate archer," will "not one suffice?" Give us one-not two! No doubt we could be happy with either, were the other at a comfortable distance!

FROG FARMING.

The Profits and Losses 'Attending the In-

"What do I think of the establishment of frog farms in the United States to supply the demand in Europe? It is a in theory only " rem state fish commissioner to a representative of the Mail and Express.

"Why do you say in theory only?" "Because it has already been tried. Experiments in frog farming have proved futile, and the man who attempts it gets some experience and no recompense for his trouble. Several frog farms have been started, always with the same result. The reason they do not succeed is this: it is very difficult to provide proper and sufficient food for them during their infantile period. The birds eat the tadpoles and the adult frogs live upon insects, leaving their watery, swampy habitation and skir-mishing around on the land for them. In a farm they can not well forage for insects, there are so many confined to a limited area. It is utterly impossible to catch enough insects to satisfy and gormandize the farm. They prey upon each other. The baby frog is greedily devoured by the large bull-frog, who floats along in a stagnant pool with his mouth open, snapping them up with avidity. It is a survival of the fittest. The fittest in this case are not enough to pay for those that perished. The embryo jelly that floats along covered with green ooze from weeds, from whose pores a million frogs may germinate in the war of the hungry and strong over the weak does not escape. A farm started several seasons ago near Cale donia, in Livingston county, this state, proved an egregious failure, and dead expense for the reasons I have mentioned. If it could be done successfully there would be millions in it. It is a Utopian dream, the fulfillment of which, I think, will be many years from the "Are many frogs consumed daily in New York?

"Yes. During the summer months from one thousand to two thousand pounds are eaten daily. They are shipped fresh to this market from Canada principally, in large half barrels. The love for frog meat is on the increase. Epicures and men of extreme wealth give exorbitant prices for them. The large green bullfrog is the chief kind sold in this market. In Chicago they are called water chickens, because their flesh is white as that of a chicken when dressed properly."

The import and export partner of a large wholesale grocery establishment said that no canned frogs were exported to Europe. "The fact is, there are no canned frogs for sale worth mentioning. In the eastern part of the British provinces and Canada a few were put up in cans. It did not pay and they stopped. Then a little while ago the industry was started on Prince Edward's island but it, and to-day canned frogs are a rarity.
Thousands upon thousands of frogs are shipped to Europe each summer and fall, alive. They are placed in large baskets, between layers of damp moss a very interior size, the largest not be-ing two and a half inches long. They are stunted in growth, and do not seem to multiply as fast as here. It has long been the dream of certain French cater ers of renown to introduce the American green bullfrog into France for the purpose of propagation. The old stock of dwarfs, they argue, would soon fall victims to the vigorous American breed, and disappear. They have no frog farms in France, even of these dwarfed specimens. I do not suppose to-day if an offer of $100 was made in Paris for a can of frogs that one could be found there. About fifty cans of snails are imported to America yearly from France. Terrapin, too, is rarely ever canned. If frog farms can be estab-lished and furnish enough to do a large canned business, my impression is it would spread, and in the course of ten years from now frog farms would be quite numerous. There are men who will try the experiment next summer, and raise frogs for the educated palates of Parisians and New Yorkers. If the succeed they will grow immensely wealthy."—New York Mail and Express.

Randolph's Dogs. John Randolph, of Roanoke, was as peculiar when it came to dogs as he was in many other respects. Mr. Hender-son, the intelligent barber under the American house, lived in Richmond. Va., when he was a little shaver—he is a big one now, and a very good one, by the way—and often saw old John and heard his piping voice. Raudolph had relatives in Richmond, and frequently drove up from Roanoke to visit them. His carriage was very large, very showy, and very much admired. It had great leather straps for springs, and a high seat in front for the driver. When he came into Richmond Randolph kicked up a vast amount of dust, and people ran to the windows to see him pass. Three horses dragged the carriage. The leader was ridden by Juba, a black man, while John, the driver, sat on the seat and drove the other two. Randolph on such occasions would lean back and gaze about him the same as if he had been a king or a conqueror. Trailing behind the carriage were five or six im-mense greyhounds, who seemed to recognize the pomposity of their situation, for they turned up their noses at the other dogs and said nothing. Juba was invested with the exclusive care of these dogs, and was ordered by his master to furnish them with clean plates to eat from, and with the best steaks that the from, and with the best steams that the market afforded. Under no circum-stances would Randolph permit his dogs to eat scraps from the table. Their palates were tickled with choice cuts, and their thirst quenched with rich milk. Dogs were very numerous in those days, and men were paid premiums for catching and killing them. As the Randolph caravan was approaching Rich-mond one day the handsomest dog in the procession ran ahead to see what he could see. Presently he encountered two eatchers, who threw a net over him and then proceeded to tie a rope about his neck. He whined and barked, and Juba hearing the commotion dug his spurs into the flanks of his leader, while John cracked his whip, and the whole party, Randolph, Juba, and John, were borne along on a run to the rescue. The catchers were just about to disappear in the woods by the side of the road with their prize when Randolph drew up. Taking in the situation he produced a pistol and ordered the release of his

SAVED BY A JACKAL.

Story of India in the Time of the Great Rebellion of the Sepoys.

"Jackals are at once the bane and the blessing of India," said a gentleman, whose face, either through a disorganized liver or from a quarter of a entury of steady curry eating under an Eastern sun, or in consequence of both, had acquired a rich yellow hue. "They banish sleep with their nightly howling, and sometimes they carry off a child, but they are the scavengers of the plains, which I think would hardly be habitable without them. Let me tell you a curious story about one of the brutes saving a child.

"I had better state at once, to check ndue sympathy, that the jackal, when he rescued Lal Chokro, acted purely as an involuntary agent, for he certainly intended to eat her. The little girl's real name, given to her in England a year previously, was Mabel Stern. Her father, Colonel Stern, whose regiment was in India, was on leave of absence in his native land when Mabel was born, and three months later rumors of the coming mutiny in India began to be heard. Colonel Stern was ordered to rejoin his command, and with his wife, who insisted on accompanying him, his infant daughter, and an ayah, or native nurse, obtained with some difficulty in London, he turned his face eastward. When he stepped ashore in Calcutta the country was in a flame of insurrection, and the Colonel learned that his own regiment, composed of sepoys, recruited chiefly in the northwest, had been among the first to turn the arms they had obtained and the arts they had learned from their English masters against their teachers. He was ordered to do general duty with the forces besieging Delhi, and, still ac-companied by his wife and child, though the ayah refused to go any further, he went up the country.

last scenes of the mutiny were being played. Their horrors, and those hat preceded them, are too well known to need description. Colonel Stern and his little family, with another ayah, were living in a bungalow, or Indian house, a few miles from Delhi, and keeping a careful watch at night time, for parties of disbanded mutineers were still prowling about, actuated by one prevailing purpose, to murder white men, women, and children whenever they could do so with a fair chance of escaping with their lives. The Colonel was an old Indian campaigner, and was apprehensive of an attack. It came at last in broad daylight and when the master of the house and his wife were absent in the city for an hour, and nobody was in the bungalow except the ayah and the child. When the Colonel and Mrs. Stern returned Mabel was zone, and the avah, who seemed half distracted, told the story in her native

"They came, Mem-Sahib,' she said,
"Stern, 'so excitedly addressing Mrs. Stern, quickly that I heard no poise until they were in the room.' Where is the Sahib Logue?' said one of them. I told them the Colonel had gone out and would not be back before night. They wanted to know where the Mem-Sahib was. I old them you were with him. "Great Allah!" said the leader, "nobody left to kill!" Then a dirty little fellow, who lives by robbery, and mutinied, but never fought, said:

.... There is still the chokre." "..." There is still the chokroe.
""Oh, Mem-Sahib! I put my forehead to the ground to them. I said:
"Kill me, but spare the chokroe." At last they said I should not see the baby die. The leader asked what her name was, and I said, Mabel Stern.
"That will not do," said the man.

'She must not meet Allah with such a name as that. The country is still red with blood. Let us call her Lal Chokree" (Red Girl). Then they took her

"Mrs. Stern shricked and rushed toward the door: The Colonel stopped "What will they do with our baby?" he asked the avah.

"The woman bowed her head sorrowfully. 'Sahib,' she said. 'I know them well. The leader will take her home, and let her lie an hour with his own little girl. I have seen her-a child a year old with a great scar on her forehead. This child will thus get all the good fortune that might have come to yours had she lived. Then he will take her to the river, and leave her lying on a pillow on the shore until the tide rises. It will be full at 9 o'clock.'

full at 9 o'clock."

"There may be time yet,' said the Colonel, looking at his watch. 'Mabel, you must stay here. Ayah, do you know where the leader's bungalow is?"

"Yes, Sahib,' she said. 'I will show you. It is only half a mile away, and, perhaps, many men will not be there.

Take your pistol, and come.'
"The Colonel followed her, pistol in hand, but they had not gone a quarter of a mile before both stopped as they heard the noise made by some animal approaching them. Then, under the bright moonlight, and only a few yards away, a great gaunt jackal passed them, going at a labored trot, and carrying something heavy in his mouth. Both saw plainly what it was—a native child

-with a great scar on its forehead.

"The Colonel raised his pistol, and was about to fire at the brute, when the ayah stopped him with a hasty grasp on the arm.

"Stay, Sahib,' she whispered. 'That is the leader's child. The jackal may have taken your's first, and then gone back for the other. Let us follow him.

He is not going fast.'

"Acting on her advice, they followed antil they saw the jackal stop and drop his burden under a tree. The next mo-ment he fled, snarling like a hunted cur. into the jungle, and the Colonel lifted his daughter, fast asleep and quite unharmed, from the side of the Hindoo baby just laid down! While Mabel had been transferring her fortunes to the leader's child, and the family were waiting patiently at the rear of the bunga-low for the completion of the operation. the jackal, coward and sneak-thief of the wilderness, had carried off the white baby, and deferred his supper until he had returned for the black one.

"A year afterward Colonel Stern and his wife stood at the window of their home in England, smilingly watching two children on the grass below. One was Mabel Stern, and the other was a dusky little girl with a scar on her forehead, and a faithful and remarkably intelligent ayah was taking care of them

The custom that is being introduced in New York of selling suites of rooms in the large apartment houses or "flats" will tend to complicate the real-estate laws, already sufficiently mixed, as the Junior Class is prepared to testify.
